

Contributors

NAOMAR DE ALMEIDA FILHO is full Professor at the Collective Health Institute at Bahia Federal University, of which he was president from 2002 to 2010. He is also President pro tempore of the Federal University of Southern Bahia. He was a visiting professor at the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill, University of California-Berkeley, Harvard University, and Université de Montréal. His published books include Universidade nova: textos críticos e esperançosos (2007); Memorial da universidade nova: UFBA 2002-2010 (2010), co-authored with Boaventura Sousa Santos; A universidade no século XXI: para uma universidade nova (2008); and A quarta missão da universidade (2012), coauthored with Fernando Seabra Santos.

JEAN-MARIE DE KETELE earned a doctorate in Educational Science from the Université Catholique de Louvain, where he now holds the title of Professor Emeritus. In 1994, he was appointed to the UNESCO chair in Educational Sciences at Cheikh Anta Diop University in Dakar, Senegal. He has chaired several international educational science associations, including the Association Internationale de Pédagogie Universitaire and the Association pour le Développement des Méthodologies de l'Évaluation en Éducation (ADMEE-Europe). His research focuses on university teaching, assessment of learning and educational systems, and the commitment of stakeholders in education and training.

ANA MARIA FREITAS TEIXEIRA earned a Master's degree in Social History from the Université de São Paulo, as well as a doctorate in Educational Science from Université Paris 8. She is an Associate Professor at the Universidade Federal do Recôncavo da Bahia. She belongs to the research group Education et Contemporanéité and is a member of the Network for Excellence in Higher Education (NEHE).

FACUNDO GIULIANO is an Associate Professor in the Educational Sciences department of the Universidad de Buenos Aires, Argentina.

BERNARD HUGONNIER earned a Master's degree in Economics from the University of Pittsburgh and a PhD in Economics from the Université Paris-Dauphine. He is the former Deputy Director of the OECD (2002-2012), Professor Emeritus of Educational Sciences at the Institut Catholique de Paris, and co-director of research at the Collège des Bernardins à Paris. His recent works include Le déclin de l'école républicaine (2013); Vaincre l'échec scolaire (2014); Pour une nouvelle gouvernance (forthcoming), with Gemma Serrano; and Quelle excellence pour l'enseignement supérieur (forthcoming), with Jean-Marie de Ketele, Philippe Parmentier, and Laurent Cosnefroy.

LUJÁN LÁZARO HERRERO earned a PhD in Pedagogy and is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Theory and History of Education at the University of Salamanca. She is a specialist in comparative and international education, specifically in educational policy. Her areas of research include comparative and international education, supranational education policy, educational policy of the European Union, student mobility in higher education, European dimension of education, and teacher training and access to higher education in the international and comparative perspective.

DONATELLA PALOMBA is full Professor of Education at the University of Rome “Tor Vergata.” She is the coordinator of the international doctoral programme “Scienze dell’Educazione”; President of SICESE (Italian Society of Comparative Education); and former President of CESE (Comparative Education Society in Europe). For more than two decades, she has been active in international and comparative studies in education. Her main research areas include European education, innovation in higher education, distance education, citizenship, and intercultural education.

WILLIAM F. PINAR has held visiting appointments at Teachers College, Columbia University, Ohio State University, the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, the University of Alberta, and the University of British Columbia, among other institutions. He has lectured widely, including at Harvard University, McGill University, and the Universities of Chicago, Oslo, Tokyo, and Wisconsin-Madison. He is the editor of a book series in curriculum theory published by Lawrence Erlbaum and Peter Lang. In 2000, he received the LSU Distinguished Faculty Award and a Lifetime Achievement Award from the American Educational Research Association. In 2004, he received an American Educational Research Association Outstanding Book Award for What is Curriculum Theory?

PATRICIA QUIROGA UCEDA holds a PhD in Pedagogy from the Universidad Complutense de Madrid (UCM). Her dissertation was titled “The Reception of Waldorf Education in Spain.” She has been a Visiting Research Student at the Pädagogische Hochschule Ludwigsburg (Germany), Roehampton University (England), and Queen’s University (Canada). She is currently a member of two research groups: Cultura Cívica y Políticas Educativas at the UCM, and the Theory and History of Education International Research Group. Her work has been published in journals such as Bordón, Teoría de la Educación, Educación y Cultura en la Sociedad de la Información, and Temps d’educació.

TATIANA ROMÃO completed a degree in psychology at the Catholic University of São Paulo, Brazil. She has conducted research on topics such as learning in virtual environments and the role of the university in Brazil. She has participated in two research projects on higher education: “Universidades Populares pelo observatório da Educação (OBEDUC-CAPES)” and “Políticas de inclusão nas novas universidades públicas federais.” She is currently teaching at the Universidade Nove de Julho, (UNINOVE), São Paulo, Brazil.

CATHERINE SCHREIBER is a postdoctoral researcher at the Institute of Applied Educational Sciences, University of Luxembourg. She defended her PhD thesis in 2014, entitled “Curricula and the Making of the Citizens: Trajectories from 19th and 20th Century in Luxembourg.” In 2013, she was a visiting scholar at the Department of Curriculum and Instruction at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. She is conducting research in the following areas: history of education and care, curriculum history, cultural studies and media history, regional history and transnational history, history of peace and conflict, and organized crime and political violence.

MANUEL TAVARES GOMES holds a PhD in Philosophy from the Universidad de Sevilla, Spain. He is associate professor at the Universidade Lusófona, Portugal, and permanent Professor at the Graduate Program in Education at the Universidade Nove de Julho (UNINOVE), São Paulo, Brazil. He is editor and member of the Editorial Board of the Revista Lusófona de Educação. He has published books and scientific papers on philosophy and the social sciences and science education.